

McMahon, Fusion, and J. P. Donnelly was chosen Sheriff and E. Polak Register.

Queens chose P. M. Daly District Attorney, and Richmond elected C. L. Bostwick County Clerk.

Contrary to all expectations, the much discussed soldier vote will not enter into the calculations concerning the chief officers of the new city government. The ballots of Guardsmen, National Army members and others will mean only the addition of less than 80,000 ballots to the city's total. Even if the entire soldier vote were thrown for Fusion it would not affect the result materially.

Next to the complete downfall of Fusion the large Socialist vote was the greatest surprise of the city election. For the first time in her political history New York saw a Socialist candidate become a real factor in a contest. Mr. Hillquit got close to four times more votes than any other Socialist candidate for Mayor ever received.

Hylan Plurality At Least 150,000.

With four-fifths of the returns in the indicated Hylan plurality was 148,000. A count of 1,690 election districts out of 2,060 in greater New York indicated the following total Majority vote:

Hylan	303,000
Mitchell	155,000
Hillquit	139,000
Bennett	58,000

The Hylan vote continued to climb as the later figures were received. The Socialist returns showed a gradual but slight gain on the Mitchell returns. The Bennett vote slumped. Hylan's plurality appeared to have passed the 150,000 mark.

Hylan more than doubled the Mitchell vote in Brooklyn. Hillquit ran close to the Mayor. The Bennett vote fell far below the figure expected by the Republican candidate's campaign managers. The return from 725 out of 780 election districts in that borough gave Hylan, 99,812; Mitchell, 48,136; Hillquit, 43,827, and Bennett, 26,470.

The Tammany candidates for the places in the Board of Estimate, outside of the Mayor, all ran well ahead of the Fusion candidates. The vote was closest in Brooklyn, where Lewis H. Pounds, the present Borough President, was making a fairly good showing against Sheriff Edward Riegelmann, the Tammany candidate. Riegelmann, however, was sufficient to practically assure his election.

Smith Far Ahead Of Adamson

The returns from 1,825 election districts out of 2,060 in greater New York gave Adamson, the Fusion candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, 145,825, and "Al" Smith, the Tammany candidate, 212,711. With all but 200 of the election districts received from Brooklyn, Smith led in that borough by over 20,000.

Controller Prendergast was far behind Charles L. Craig, the Tammany candidate for Controller. In 1,690 election districts out of the city's total of 2,060 the vote stood: Prendergast, 158,991; Craig, 251,480. Craig ran over 35,000 ahead of Prendergast in Manhattan. Richmond, with only 3 election districts missing, gave Craig 8,023 and Prendergast 3,811.

Frank L. Dowling, president of the Board of Aldermen and Tammany candidate for Borough President of Manhattan, polled about two votes to one against Marcus M. Marks, the present Borough President and Fusion candidate for reelection.

Borough President Pounds of Brooklyn ran close to his Tammany opponent, but the Fusion candidates in any other borough, O'Loughlin, the independent candidate, was a bad third. The returns were slow in coming from the entire Democratic local ticket had won in his borough by large majorities.

The Hylan vote in Richmond over Mitchell was about 4,500. Sheriff Smith's plurality over Fire Commissioner Adamson, in the contest for President of the Board of Aldermen in Richmond, was about 5,000. Charles L. Craig carried Richmond by about 2,500.

Scranton Race Close

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 6.—Forty-nine out of seventy-two Scranton districts gave Alexander T. Connell 6,666 and John F. Durkan 6,159 in the non-partisan Majority fight.

Fifteen scattering districts of the 184 in Lackawanna County indicate the election of the Republican county candidates.

Harrisburg Is Republican

HARRISBURG, Penn., Nov. 6.—Thirty-eight of fifty-three districts gave Hovetter for Mayor 4,056, E. C. 3,295. Republican county ticket elected.

By C. W. Gilbert

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The New York City returns received to-night were a great relief to the Administration. The Hillquit vote was large, but not so large as was expected. A fear had grown here—the kind of fear that sometimes possesses a person who has done an uncorrupt act—that the Socialist candidate would run second, and a close second, to Hylan. Democratic politicians came down here with stories to that effect, with tales of extraordinary polls taken, until the one dread here in Administration circles was that the anti-war vote would reach a large total.

But Hillquit is badly defeated, and the politicians in Washington will find a way to show how the big plurality for Hylan, in spite of his bedeviled personality, is an endorsement of the Administration, it being argued that New York turned to Hylan as the surest and most effective way of overwhelming the disloyal campaign of Hillquit, just as a few years ago they turned to Mc-Clellan, deserting Ives in droves as the only certain way of defeating Hearst.

On the whole, the administration is well out of a bad situation, from which the only creditable escape was an act of fine courage and freedom from partisanship of which it was incapable. Fate dealt with it queerly. In the first place, it is inclined—rather more than inclined, habituated—to set a high value upon regularity. And the regular candidate was a man whose nomination should have turned its stomach, the choice of its worst enemies, selected to catch all the votes of the disaffected, the pro-Germans, the Hearstites, the anti-British, put in the field by a faction of the Democratic party which hates the administration and loses no opportunity to embarrass it.

In the next place, the candidate whom the Administration would naturally have preferred to see elected, and whose election it would have hailed as a great victory for itself, was recognized from the outset as having no chance to be elected. Then this candidate, being thus hopeless, committed the unpardonable offense of hitching approval of the war to his last cause, so that his defeat would look like a repudiation of the Administration. Unpardonable offense is said advisedly.

The administration is angry at Mr. Mitchell. It will not forgive him for not making his run, when he saw he was licked, straight upon the issue of his record as giving a clean and honest government to New York. But Mr. Mitchell made the position of the administration still more unpleasant by smearing "Friends of Peace" and pro-Germanism across the countenance of Hylan, so that his election would look like a defeat for the administration.

And while all this was going on, alarming reports of Mr. Hillquit's Bolshevik report kept coming in, leaving the Administration with the uncomfortable consciousness of failing to take off its coat and make an effort to check a spectacular display of disloyalty.

Held Campaign Local

Technically the position of the Administration was correct. Morally it was weak. It was the position of the man who has a perfectly good reason for not having jumped into a river or rushed into a burning house to save the life of a child who would tell him to his face that he is a coward, but he can't quite feel that people take his explanation at its face value. The trouble with discretion is—that it is discretion.

The technically correct position of the Administration was that the New York campaign was a local campaign and that the national Administration must not mix in local politics. The value of the life of the child in the river is X and the value of the life of the man on the bank, respected citizen and father of a family, is 2X. There is no escaping the mathematics, though Mr. Roosevelt, when he was President, found it necessary to mix in the state campaign against Hearst, and if the Bolshevik movement in this country gets big enough the present Administration will have to take cognizance of it locally before another year goes by.

There is another side to this thing that makes the judicious gripe. Mr. Wilson has grown since his war began—grown vastly. He must be the master of his entire fortunes before another year passes, and no one looking the field over will say with confidence that it is not the man who should be. But he still keeps some of his original littleness with him. He still treats the war as a Democratic war, something to be made by his fellow partisans and Tammany in Congress as part of the war-making machinery.

That doubtless influenced the correct but not very moral position taken with regard to the New York campaign. An important Democratic politician said to me the other day: "Hylan will win and Tammany will be the national Administration." In practice that will not be found to be true. In theory it explains much.

The New York experience will do Mr. Wilson good. It won't change his hard Presbyterian determination to fight this war out. If anything it will make it harder. The Bolshevik movement will speed Mr. Wilson up and make him demand more of his subordinates.
